Since 1946, Cornell ILR has played a vital role in Western New York, working in partnership with businesses, unions, government, education and community organizations to build an economy that works for all.

High Road Fellowships were launched in 2009, in collaboration with community-based think-tank Partnership for the Public Good. They connect Cornell undergraduates with practitioners and creative community leaders who are driving change in the local economy.

Fellows are in Buffalo, NY for eight weeks in the summer, working on projects through their host organization.

TO REJECT THE REQUIEM

To Reject the Requiem
By Rachel Whalen
For the High Roads Class of 2017

At the edge of ourselves we began looking for a quiet rescue.
You see, this was long after we began to feel we had woken up on the wrong side of the sunrise that the daytime air was too thick with rhetoric copied and pasted from a past we wanted no part of.
We had many of us long since pushed past those feelings numberless of hopelessness, under this edge of ourselves we were spilling into nowhere.

But we did not fall into the requiem.
We knew the music we wanted to make.
We had heard it somewhere from that music box wound by the best hands of history.

And then
our quiet rescue
in a place perhaps unexpected.
A place where there dwell shark girls where there dwell segresaurus where there dwell sprawling octopi that can swallow cities whole. We knew the music we wanted to make, and Buffalo, you with all your artists and your anchors you tasted like an answer.

Buffalo, you
with your electric lights strung across centuries you taught us what it is to be a many-faceted thing a kaleidoscope ever-shifting in our hands.
Before your Queen light we saw your vibrant colors and we tried to become them.

We stroked your streets, combed your silos – from innovation to engagement trust, art, impact, community – we spelled these words out loud in your air.

We rejected the requiem.
We knew the music we wanted to make and we had to learn that sometimes when you approach the piano there are broken keys.
And while we did not accept it sometimes we could only sound a certain policy brief or phone call and hope for the best and sometimes it was all out of tune.

But we knew the music we wanted to make and with guiding hands strung across the city we opened the piano.

We saw its underbelly, its hammers and its nuts and bolts its partnerships and its murals, its newest citizens and its brilliant children and its high road to somewhere.
We opened the piano and saw in every vibrating string a map of you, Buffalo, and there we found our melody.

So now, each of us
our own quiet rescue (perhaps not so quiet) sung across the Queen city, strung across the universe – So now, each of us

our own piano string plucked across the night.

And as we say farewell for now to you, dear Buffalo, we promise we will not forget your light.
